General feedback (5 points):

Great job, Lilith!! 😊

I really enjoyed reading about why Trinidadian fish have been observed to evolutionarily have larger brains when they are in a competitive environment. I also liked how you paralleled it with why humans developed larger brain sizes. Your writing is coherent and formal but also relaxed, which is fitting for the general audience. I also liked that you were determined to make connections between your anthropology course and this biology course!

A few considerations:

- On page 1, you can restructure the sentence to “...in which the experiment was conducted,..”
- On page 2, “Sometimes,” (add comma)
- The sadness example (page 2) - restructure/ explain with more clarity.

- I wonder if you can add a sentence describing the mathematical model used without potentially confusing the reader, since it seems integral to Gonzalez' research and claims/conclusions.
- Citations need to be in alphabetical order, so "Page" citation before "University" citation, and use hanging indents.

Overall assessment (excellent, good, needs improvement):
