

Article 40 Review

I thought the article topic was very interesting and the article itself was well-written and cogent. The main topic was discussed well and the transitions were smooth, making it easy to follow along. I really enjoyed the fact that a little bit of the history of the birth-mark was given and I think that made the readers more invested in the article itself which is a good thing. The writing style is appropriate for the audience and the article is well-structured. The grammar and spelling all look good. I think the citations could be written more clearly. The rationale for choosing this article is clearly explained and well-written. It really highlights how biology and academia plays into real life. Some of the more technical terms, especially about the description of the laser surgery could have been defined a bit more later but other than that, it is an excellent article!
